WORLD'S END

The drama-laden month of April rings with echoes of events that crashed the headlines and changed the course of history:

PRESIDENT LINCOLN SHOT AT THE THEATRE LAST EVENING — SECRETARY SEWARD DAGGERED IN HIS BED BUT NOT MORTALLY WOUNDED — CLARENCE AND FREDERICK SEWARD BADLY HURT — ESCAPE OF THE ASSASSINS!

SAN FRANCISCO DOOMED — GREAT EARTHQUAKE! — DEATH AND DESTRUCTION SWEEP THE BAY CITIES — HUNDREDS DIE IN RUINS!

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA IS AT WAR TODAY! PRESIDENT WILSON ANNOUNCES PROCLAMATION TO THE NATION — 91 INTERNED VESSELS SEIZED — SCORE OF U-BOATS ALREADY IN MEXICAN WATERS, U.S. LEARNS!

3 OKINAWA AIRSTRIPS CAPTURED, 100,000 YANKS DRIVING INLAND! ROOSEVELT DEAD, TRUMAN SWORN IN! YANKS 15 MILES FROM BERLIN....RUSS TANK FLEETS SMASH WAY INTO CENTER OF BERLIN! UNITED NATIONS CONFERENCE ON INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATION OPENS IN SAN FRANCISCO.(Photo caption: "Secretary of State Stettinius is pictured addressing yesterday's United Nations Conference. Mayor Lapham is at the right and Alger Hiss, secretary general of the conference, at the left. Between Hiss and Stettinius is Governor Warren." —San Francisco Examiner, April 26, 1945.)

The inauguration of George Washington as first President of the United States took place at Federal Hall, New York, on April 30, 1789 and prayers for guidance of the new President were led by the ministers of all the churches in the city, thus putting the seal of a Christian nation on the new ship of state. April saw the U.S. Mint established by order of Congress in 1792; the Library of Congress founded with the purchase of $5,000 worth of books in 1800; construction begun on the first railroad in the United States in 1826; transatlantic steamer travel launched in 1838; the use of the motto "In God We Trust" on all coins authorized by Congress in 1864; the first run of elevated railroad trains in New York City in 1878; the North Pole reached by Com. Robert E. Peary in 1909; and television demonstrated, New York to Washington, D.C., in 1927.

April echoes carry reverberations of the bombardment of Fort Sumter that precipitated the war between the States; of the opening shots fired in the war with Mexico in 1846 and in the Spanish-American War of 1898; of "the shot heard round the world", fired by Colonial minutemen at Concord Bridge; and the final volleys in the War for American Independence that ended--as it had begun--in the month of April. From far down the corridor of time, opened as though by an electrical device as we crossed the threshold of this momentous month, we catch the crescendo and diminuendo of hoofbeats, the hammering on the door at midnight and the shout, "The British are coming!" that rallied farmers and villagers along the route on which the fate of the nation rode with Paul Revere. We hear the salutes of locomotive and steamboat whistles and the cheers of well-wishers that signalized the first westward dash of the Overland Pony Express from St. Joseph, Missouri a century ago; and, in the tumult of San Francisco's earth-shaking, fiery ordeal, the voice of the Examiner's City Editor exclaiming, "Boys, looks like the end of the world!"

On the wave length, so to speak, of the date of this writing--April 21--we tune in on the battle cry "Remember the Alamo!" as it spurred the forces of General Sam Houston to put Santa Anna's Mexican army to rout at San Jacinto, Texas; and we hear the fanfare of bells and gun salute that announced the birth of a daughter to Britain's Duke and Duchess of York, the present Queen Elizabeth II.

To what great climax is this stupendous march of history mounting? Well, on the authority of the Great Brains of the Atomic Age--whose participation in a televised discussion invariably commands the attentive deference of the panel moderator; whose weighty pronouncements rate full-page spreads of newsprint--the grand finale will be nuclear annihilation as an aftermath of a push-button war involving all nations and according victory to none: in effect, world's end for humanity; and for this weary old globe meaningless survival as a space vehicle bereft of all forms of life. The great drama that has posted so many red-letter dates on the April page of history's calendar will be as though it had never happened, for there will be no ears to hear its echoes, no eyes to read the record ---

UNLESS — and here's the catch! — cringing humanity immediately agrees to total disarmament and submits to the yoke of a world dictatorship under which no nation can war upon another (and, incidentally, under which no man may buy or sell, or move from place to place unless he carries the mark of regimented slavery, associated in the 13th chapter of the Book of Revelation with the sinister number 666).

"World peace through world law — one world or none!" This is the theme song of the Einsteins, the Baruchs, the Tellers, the Kaplans and the Strausses, who, with their fellow tribesmen Lillienthal, Bacher, Rabinowitch, Oppenheimer and Rabi, have dominated the field of nuclear development, and whose pole-star is the Haifa Technion, Israel's Institute of Technology, conveniently located atop Mt. Carmel at the projected seat of world government. (Boris Smolar's column in The California Jewish Voice of Feb. 26, 1960 states that "Israel has reached an agreement with the Smithsonian Institute in Washington on setting up a station on Mt. Carmel for tracking space satellites.")

Dr. Joseph Kaplan, chairman of the U.S. National Committee for the International Geophysical Year, was spotlighted in the B'nai B'rith Messenger as the main speaker, together with Gen. Joseph Avidar, Israel's Ambassador to the Soviet Union, at the 31st annual West Coast conference of the Israel Histadrut Campaign held in Los Angeles,the occasion being the celebration of Israel's ten years of statehood. This glimpse of Dr. Kaplan's true allegiance ties in neatly with an INS dispatch of Dec. 14, 1958 from Los Angeles: "The chairman of the United States National Committee for the International Geophysical Year said today that he opposed a regulation that requires State employes to take a 'loyalty oath.' Dr. Joseph Kaplan, professor of physics at the University of California at Los Angeles, testified before a State Assembly subcommittee on constitutional rights that loyalty oaths 'make it difficult at times for persons in public service.'"

To see Dr. Rabi in his proper setting we must turn again to the kosher press. Columnist Milton Friedman states in The California Jewish Voice of January 3, 1958: "President Eisenhower has mentioned the importance of America's foreign-born scientists a number of times since the launching of the Soviet sputniks. In fact, the chairman of the President's own Science Advisory Committee is Dr. Isidor Rabi. In addition to functioning as Mr. Eisenhower's leading scientific adviser, Dr. Rabi serves as a sponsor of the Haifa Technion, Israel's Institute of Technology. During the McCarthy era some government investigators adopted unsound criteria in checking individuals for clearance to work on sensitive projects. One notion that prevailed was that Jews were more likely to be subversive than non-Jews. Today the emphasis on unhampered scientific progress is such that this prejudiced concept is being shattered ...Other top-ranking Jewish scientists include J. Robert Oppenheimer of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton...."

"Elder Statesman" Bernard M. Baruch, whose alleged service to the nation as United States representative on the U.N. Atomic Energy Commission can be summed up in his treasonable proposal to surrender our nuclear secrets and weapons to an international authority, was quoted in the San Francisco Examiner of Aug. 17,1957 as saying that he would go to Russia at the drop of the hat if necessary to insure world peace, adding, "Ever since Lenin, every regime in Russia has invited me to come there. Lenin asked me to come and spend six months as an advisor,and he told his emissary: 'I know Mr. Baruch will not be interested in money. But if he could think up a goodly number of millions that would interest him, let him name them.'" Bill Corum, who interviewed Baruch, opened his article with the cryptic words: "It is an exhilarating and memorable experience to talk with a man who may well control the greatest nuclear weapon in the world."

Dr. Edward Teller, Hungarian-born escapee from Nazi anti-Semitism and much-touted "Father of the hydrogen bomb", recently hit the front page of the San Francisco Examiner in a blaze of headlines that carried the interview over to complete monopoly of page 30: "EXCLUSIVE —DR. TELLER TALKS ABOUT NUCLEAR BOMBS AND THE RACE WITH RUSSIA —KHRUSHCHEV PLAN MEANS DISARMING OF THE FREE WORLD ONLY, WORLD MUST JOIN IN A SUPRA-GOVERNMENT TO END REAL DANGER....Some form of supra-national government is absolutely necessary if the world wants to end the danger of nuclear war and if mankind is to enjoy the tremendous fruits of nuclear energy applied to peacetime uses...."

Though gone in the flesh, the influence of the late Albert Einstein (named by the Moscow paper Pravda as one of Stalin's best friends in the U.S.) lives on in the form of a "Renounce War or Die" manifesto that its co-author, Bertrand Russell, the chinless UNESCO specialist, notorious free-love advocate and ardent admirer of Soviet Russia, offers as the answer to the world's ills in the era of imminent nuclear devastation. An AP dispatch from London, carried in The Sacramento Bee of October 5, 1959 under the heading BERTRAND RUSSELL PREDICTS RUSSIA-U.S. ALLIANCE, ran: "Philosopher Bertrand Russell said today a close alliance between the United States and the Soviet Union is likely in the near future and that this in effect will be a world government...His remarks were made answering a question about the abolition of war which he said would come about only through a world government with a monopoly on all important war weapons."

Addressing the National Press Club in Washington, D.C. on last February 19, Secretary of State Christian Herter forecast the gradual reduction of national armed forces by this government and transfer of armaments to international custody. A New York Times editorial stated in part: "The ultimate solution, as envisaged by Secretary Herter and others, must lie in total disarmament which will create a world of peaceful change under law administered by a world court and enforced by an international police force." At that time Herter and President Eisenhower confidently awaited Senatorial repeal of the Connally Act which reserves to us the right to determine which cases are strictly domestic issues and outside the jurisdiction of an international tribunal. Late returns on this matter were carried in an AP dispatch of March 29 from Washington: "The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today laid aside indefinitely the emotion-charged controversy over the jurisdiction of the World Court. It voted 9-7 to postpone action on President Eisenhower's request for repeal of a U.S. veto over the jurisdiction of the court in cases in which the U.S. claims domestic jurisdiction."

It is against this backdrop of defeatism and gloom that the curtain goes up on the next act, the Summit conference to be held in Paris on the 16th of next month. Dragging their feet somewhat in disappointment over the Connally set-back,Eisenhower and Herter nevertheless approach that slippery ascent with enough potential treason in their briefcases to destroy the Republic they are sworn to uphold and protect. Subjected as he is to the compelling clamor to save the world at any cost from the horrors of nuclear devastation, no doubt the words he spoke on January 20, 1953 and again in 1957 no longer ring the faintest tinkle in Ike's befuddled memory: "I,Dwight D. Eisenhower, do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

The stage is well set. Simultaneous showings in a score of major cities here and abroad of Hollywood's big effort On the Beach, a film version of the novel of that title with an all-star cast including Ava Gardner, Fred Astaire and Gregory

Peck, has given a preview of a fallout-contaminated, dying world in the wake of a nuclear holocaust, supposedly taking place in the year 1964. The novel itself has burgeoned on every paper-back-book rack from coast to coast. Somebody, the story goes, pushed a button by accident or design, starting an Israeli-Arab war, which, by chain reaction, sparked in rapid succession a Russian-NATO war and a Russian-Chinese war, eventually involved the United States and rained destruction in the form of everything from atom to cobalt bombs.

The story opens at the point at which it becomes known to the survivors Down Under that all life has been wiped out in the Northern Hemisphere. From Australia, where a mere remnant of humanity lives on borrowed time, Commander Dwight Towers and his small crew aboard the submarine Scorpion (all that remains of the U.S. Navy) reconnoiter by periscope, not daring to surface at the high level of radioactivity along the shorelines of America and Europe. The coastal cities on these continents are seen to be ghost towns. Life in Australia, facing a tentative deadline as the creeping death spreads Down Under, draws drearily to a close. The sophisticated characters of the story, following their natural bent, become increasingly inebriated: "When it comes, I'll have it here, on this verandah, in this chair, with a drink in my hand..." "Let me get you a whisky." "Brandy," shouts Moira Davidson (she being the heroine of the story if it has a heroine). "Alcohol, taken internally, seems to increase the tolerance to radioactivity. Didn't you know that?" "You mean, if you get pickled you last longer?" Business booms in the sale of suicide pills to forestall the expected final hour of sick convulsions. Moira is alone as the curtain falls: "Then she put the tablets in her mouth and swallowed them down with a mouthful of brandy, sitting behind the wheel of her big car." Finis. Dead world.

Time Magazine of Jan. 31, 1955 quoted that great brain, Bertrand Russell, on this subject: "Suppose atomic bombs had reduced the population of the world to one brother and sister; should they let the human race die out? I do not know the answer, but I do not think it can be in the affirmative merely on the ground that incest is wicked." This hoary old rascal and Nevil Shute, author of On the Beach, seem to have been kindred spirits, though the latter, having killed off everybody, had no occasion to consider the question of re-peopling the world, incestuously or otherwise. The end of the world came for Nevil Shute when he passed away last January. It remains for us to struggle through the pall of fog and gloom that he bequeathed to the world we still have to live in, and regain the sunlight of sanity.

If your Christian faith can withstand the hypnotic spell cast by these prophets of doom and enable you to look forward to the bright tomorrow of God's Kingdom established upon earth, when the government shall be upon Christ's shoulder, you will foresee the end of this present world system--the Babylonian system of money manipulation, usury, astronomical national debt, and taxation to the point of confiscation, of which the promoters of an antichristian world-government--devotees of the Babylonian Talmud--are the recognized custodians. You will appreciate these opening verses of the 60th chapter of Isaiah: "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people: but the Lord shall arise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee. And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising."

THE END OF THE WORLD NEXT TUESDAY? — From the Diary of Samuel Pepys: "October 25, 1662--Great talk among the people how some of the Fanatiques do say that the end of the world is at hand, and that next Tuesday is to be the day."

THIS HAS BEEN GOING ON FOR A LONG, LONG TIME — the threat of lightning attack, the fear of invasion, the tidy profit to be made thereon. On April 18, 1664 Pepys noted in his diary: "I, after discoursing with the Joyces, away by coach to the 'Change; and there, among other things, do hear that a Jew hath put in a policy of four per cent, to any man, to insure him against a Dutch war for four months; I could find in my heart to take him at this offer, but however will advise first... April 21st: The House this day have voted that the King be desired to demand right for the wrong done us by the Dutch, and that they will stand by him with their lives and fortunes, which is a very high vote, and more than I expected. What the issue will be, God knows!"

A TALE OF TWO CITIES

Sen. Russell B. Long of Louisiana, speaking in the U.S. Senate on April 4,1960: "The school integration program in the District of Columbia has caused two effects: First, the white people are leaving the District in great numbers; and, second, the public schools are coming closer and closer to being all colored...This whole picture is but another illustration of the fact that people would rather associate with those of their own kind. These people are not carriers of hatred. They just wish to be left alone, to live their own lives as they choose. It is most obvious, by looking at the present picture presented by the District of Columbia public schools, that white people do not want to integrate the schools, and will not submit to an order to do so." The March, 1960 issue of the Negro magazine Sepia carries on its gaudy cover, with a prophetically-affirmative illustration, the burning question and title of its lead article, WASHINGTON: ALL NEGRO BY 1961?

(THE NATIONALIST, published monthly at 74 Princedale Road, London W. 11) December, 1959: "KEEP BRITAIN WHITE--Pictured here is a section of the crowd of 5,000 packing Trafalgar Square, London, at the recent combined protest rally against the coloured invasion held by the White Defence League and the National Labour Party...The transcendent issue before us today is racial self-preservation or destruction. Is our ancient homeland to be a place of settlement for Africans and Asiatics, and our population made mulatto, or are we, the people of Britain, going to drive the Old Gang from power, and the coloured invaders from our homeland, and establish a White Britain for the British, free from alien control and exploitation? The fight for survival is on....Britain awake!"
